COURT OPINION

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

v.

Hector Y. Rivera

No. 2-2013-Criminal

Attorney for Defendant: Scott Bennett, Esquire

Summary of the Case

Before the Court was Defendant's appeal of the Court's Order denying his Motion for Sentence Modification. Defendant originally pled guilty to Receiving Stolen Property and was sentenced to twelve (12) months' probation, to pay restitution in the amount of $55.00, refrain from the use of controlled substances, submit to random drug testing and pay $500 for the cost of the public defender. Defendant thereafter filed a Motion for Modification requesting that the cost of the public defender be struck as a condition of probation, arguing that the Court lacks statutory authority to impose such an order and also that there is no evidence of record supporting the basis for the $500 cost.

The Court opined that the United States Supreme Court has held that there is no constitutional prohibition to a state court conditioning probation on an offender's reimbursement of the costs of the public defender, if the offender is financially able to make such reimbursement. Fuller v. Oregon, 417 U.S. 40 (1974). The Court then identified that in Pennsylvania, sentencing courts must do two things when imposing such orders: 1) specifically make reimbursement of costs a condition of probation at the time of sentencing; and 2) take into consideration a defendant's ability to pay the cost and te financial burden that will be placed on a defendant. Commonwealth v. Pride, 380 A.2d 1267 (Pa.Super. 1977); Commonwealth v. Opara, 362 A.2d 305 (Pa.Super. 1976).

In Pride, the trial court's sentencing order did not condition the defendant's probation on payment by the defendant of the cost of his representation. Id. at 1270. The Superior Court reasoned that it was bound by the sentence of the trial court and could not "redefine the repayment order as a probation condition or fine to transform a statutorily unauthorized repayment into a permissible order." Id. The Court indicated that the lower court could have properly imposed the disputed cost had it done so clearly as a condition of the defendant's probation at the time of sentencing. Id.

In the case at bar, payment of the cost of representation by the public defender was made an explicit condition of Defendant's probation and served the rehabilitative measures of the Court. The Court noted that probation is a constructive alternative to imprisonment and the conditions of a defendant's probation are tailored to the individual in a manner that best serves the community and also a defendant's reintegration into society as a law-abiding citizen. As a result, the Court initially determined the fee was a permissible condition of probation.

Next, the Court considered the financial burden of the cost to Defendant. The Court reviewed the details of Defendant's Pre-Sentence Investigation to determine that Defendant had the capacity to work and earn money to pay his fines, costs and restitution and was therefore able to pay the cost. Finally, the Court opined that Defendant's failure to pay would result in another hearing pursuant to Pa.R.Cr.P. 708 at which time Defendant would be provided an opportunity to be heard regarding any allegation of indigency and reasons for the failure to pay.

Finally, the Court noted that Defendant received pecuniary gain from his crime and that Defendant was a repeat offender. It was the Court's opinion that restitution of $55.00 alone would be insufficient to deter Defendant in the future, and that bearing the cost of the public defender provides a more appropriate deterrent while also serving the rehabilitative measures of the Court. Inasmuch as courts are provided with flexibility to determine "all the direct and indirect damages caused by a defendant and then order restitution so that the defendant will understand the egregiousness of his conduct, be deterred from repeating this conducts, and be encouraged to live in a responsible way." Com v. Harner, 617 A.2d 702, 706 (Pa. 1982).

The Court therefore determined that there was no issue which merited a modification of Defendant's sentence, and respectfully requested the Superior Court also find no merit in Defendant's appeal.
